the way of rates—all are putting their clips away, nicely and safely—and feel quite in-different while the present combinations and consequent low market continues. No one consequent low market continues. No one talks of less than 95c, and many much higher. As an indication of the feelings and determination of our growers, I may say that all the principal growers of what is known as 'Wool Hollow,' met the past week, and, I am informed, bound themselves not to sell at less than one dollar per pound. If all the Wool Growers of Ohio will but stand as firm as their brethern of lake and Geauga, somebody would 'get a firm in their ear' this time."
